Individual vs Organizational NPIs

National Provider Identifier (NPI)

A National Provider Identifier (NPI) is a 10-digit numerical unique identifier and a Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act (HIPAA) standard. NPI replaced the numerous different provider numbers previously issued by each payer with a single identifier that is used across all health plans.

There are 2 different types of NPIs; Type 1 (individual) and Type 2 (organizational).

All clinical providers need to obtain a type 1 (individual) NPI number. This number will identify the provider who rendered services to a patient and needs to be reported on claim forms sent to payers.

Group practices that bill with a group tax identification number (TIN) should also apply for a Type 2, organizational NPI. This Type 2 NPI number should be used to complete enrollments with payers and for billing purposes. For group practices, individual providers' NPIs will be linked to the group NPI in the payer's system and both reported on claim forms submitted for reimbursement.
