

How to Post a HRA Payment?

07/08/2024 7:55 pm EDT

Increasingly employers are offering employees an HRA, or Health Reimbursement Account to help offset medical expenses. It's not really an insurance payment or a patient payment.

Currently, we do not have the option to post the HRA payment and designate it as such in DrChrono; however, as a workaround, we can post the HRA payments in two ways.

1. Adding HRA as secondary/tertiary insurance
2. By posting as patient payment.

Option 1 - Adding HRA as secondary/tertiary insurance

Now, let us see how to post the payment by adding HRA an insurance.

1. Open patient demographics.
2. Navigate to the Insurances tab, and select secondary insurance. (If the patient has secondary insurance, you can use the tertiary insurance tab instead.)
3. Enter HRA in the Insurance company field and click Save Demographics.

The screenshot shows the DrChrono interface for a patient's demographics. The 'Insurances' tab is selected, and the 'Secondary Ins' option is highlighted. The 'Insurance Company' dropdown menu is set to 'HRA'. Other visible information includes the patient's name (David Prabhakaran), date of birth (March 7, 2000), and primary provider (Dr. Eugene Walsh).

6. Select the check date, posted date, and enter the check# if you have one.

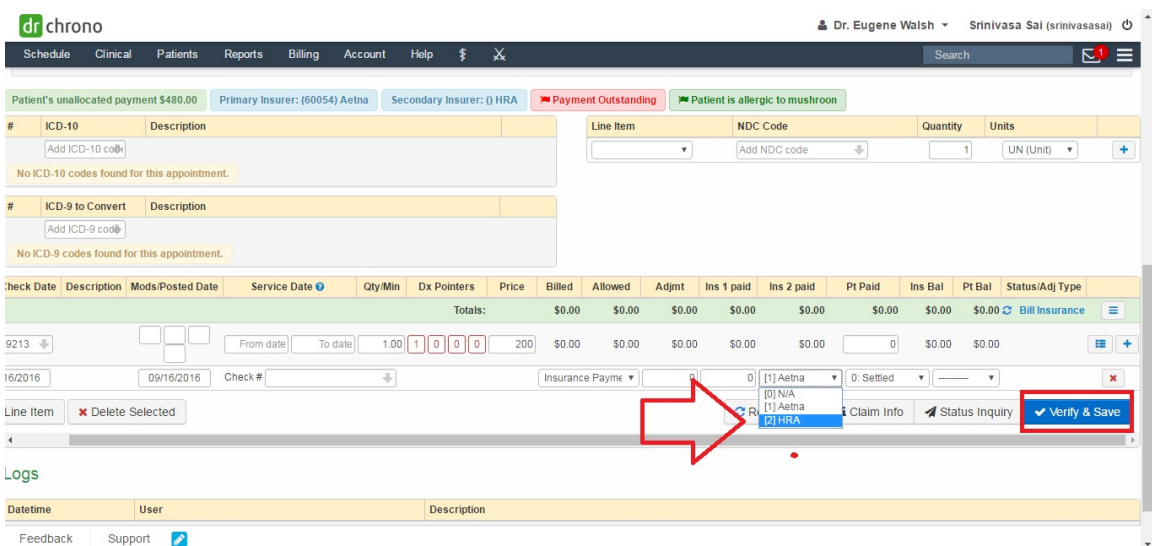

- Entering the check number here will be helpful if any research is needed for the payment in the future.
- In addition, you can scan and upload a copy of the check and add it to the account so that if an image of the payment is needed in the future, it can be accessed easily. See this help desk article for information on how to scan and attach EOBs to your account (link).

7. From the reason code drop-down, select Insurance payment and enter the payment in the Ins 1 paid field.

8. From the insurance drop-down, please select [2] HRA (or [3] if in the tertiary insurance field) and click on Verify and Save.

Option 2 - Post as a patient payment

7. The payment will now be visible on the patient's account. If it is not applied to a specific appointment, it will show as unallocated (marked in red). If it is attached to a particular appointment and/or line item, the information will show in the spots marked by the blue boxes.

- You can also use the red/gray bubbles as a visual to see if a patient's payment is unallocated or fully allocated. The black arrow just to the left of the red/gray bubble will expand and show you additional details regarding how the payment was applied. This is especially useful when the payment has been applied to multiple appointments.

- For the example below, even though the patient has $25 in their unallocated cash, we can choose only to move $5 or $10 of it and leave the remaining unallocated, or use it for a different appointment.
